Case Study

Ella first met our team during detached youth work sessions in Pump Room Gardens, and this early street-based engagement became the foundation of a strong, trusting relationship. She continues to actively seek out staff whenever she knows we are out on detached, demonstrating how safe and reliable those connections have become for her. Because of this initial contact, Ella now engages consistently across detached sessions, youth clubs, and has been involved in key targeted interventions, giving us multiple touchpoints to support her wellbeing and encourage positive life choices. As a result, her behaviour has become significantly less risky, and she has developed a wider range of protective factors – including improved emotional stability, stronger decision-making, safer relationships, and sustained engagement with positive services.
